The Extra Hitter can be substituted for in the batting order and all rules applicable to the starting players apply, including reentry. Teams that start a game with the 10-man line-up must complete the game with the same number. (Injury and ejection exception would apply)

ARTICLE XVI - 'BELLY-BUTT SLIDE' RULE

If a runner is to be either forced or tagged out at any base (including home plate) he must slide either head first or feet first, or veer away from the play and not hinder the fielder in making a further play. Cross body blocks, rolling blocks, and leg whips are not permitted. This applies when a fielder has the ball or is about to receive the ball and on or near (within three feet of) the base. If the runner fails to slide he is automatically out and if the fielder has a second play (for example on a double play) that runner or batter-runner is also out. Since this is interference, runners will return to the last base touched before the interference call was made. In the event the batter-runner has not reached first base, all runners shall return to the base occupied at the time of the pitch. If a fielder is more than three feet from the base, with the ball or about to catch the ball, the runner does not have to slide. If in the umpire's judgment, a runner attempts to use excessive force, for example, throwing an elbow, using his arms in a blocking manner, or using a body block, the runner is also ejected from the game, however, he will not be made to sit out the next or subsequent game unless in the judgment of the Umpire there was an intent to injure, if so he shall be reported to the President per Article VI B. If the situation allows for a collision, the runner may protect himself by putting his arms in front of his body (for protection only - not to use force or to push off) before the collision.
